Despite this, the sentiments that they express generally resonate with scientists, which is understandable since Clarke held degrees in physics and mathematics, so was of a scientific way of thinking himself. Clarke is often credited with having developed the idea of using satellites with geostationary orbits as a telecommunications relay system, based on a paper he wrote in 1945. When, however, the lay public rallies round an idea that is denounced by distinguished but elderly scientists and supports that idea with great fervor and emotion -- the distinguished but elderly scientists are then, after all, probably right. Andrew Zimmerman Jones is a science writer, educator, and researcher. District Attorney Clark said, "Forensic experts were able to match the DNA from the defendant with the victim who was strangled and killed in her home with her 5-year-old son present. Investigators never gave up on getting justice for her, and her alleged killer is now being held accountable." "Porter's 5-year-old son was in the home and was alone with her body for two days before it was discovered," Clark said. "DNA was recovered from under the victim's fingernails. Recently the investigation matched that evidence with Fleetwood's DNA, using technology that wasn't available in 1996." Librarian/Media Specialist Atlanta Independent School System $55,600.21 2014.
