Make sure the dupatta is pinned right at the centre of the head, otherwise the lop-sidedness can get caught in photos and look bad. The number 1 mistake new drapers make while pinning a dupatta, is to pin it on top of the head, and then straight down to your shoulders. This makes your head be stuck in a place- like its frozen. Instead, leave some loose fabric between the head and the shoulders so you can move your head easily. Whenever it comes to weddings, a main expectation from the bride is that she wears heavily embroidered attire. However, not all brides have this preference. Some may also like to wear simple yet classy wedding dresses. An elegant bridal dupatta is a perfect choice to pair in this case. As the buyer, you should be aware of possible: Shipping, taxes, and discount codes calculated at checkout. 5. Decide how much (if any) of the dupatta on the head you want to bring forward. Another hassle-free draping style is to pleat the dupatta and pin it to the choli, on one side of the body. This style works well when you want to highlight the lehenga skirt and choli and keep the dupatta out of the way. This works in case of contrast dupattas too. This is also a great way to wear your dupatta on a mehendi and sangeet function, when you want to keep it neat and out of the way. A beautifully embellished dupatta makes the work easier! With a heavy dupatta, you can get away with a not-so-extraordinary lehenga skirt and choli. The dupatta can easily become the highlight of the look.
